presentation from the side of the Allies of one of the most important questions which will command the consideration of the nations in the discussion of peace at the close of the war, the official orders and testimony submitted with facsimiles of documents make a powerful case. Charges discussed are the violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemburg, and of the French frontier, the killing of prisoners and wounded, looting, arson, rape, and murder, violations of the Geneva Conventions, use of forbidden bullets, burning liquids and gases, bombardment of fortresses without notice, and of open towns, and destruction of public buildings, churches, and art museums, treacherous methods of warfare, and cruelties to the civil population.

The Last Weapon. By Theodora Wilson Wilson. C. W. Daniel, Ltd., London, England. 1916. 185 p. One shilling net.

"A Vision," the author calls this imaginative story of evil spirits that rule men in war, and of the final victory of the "last weapon" which must be used finally to settle differences between men—the force of love. The book makes a dramatic contrast between men ruled by the war spirit of fear and hatred, and the few courageous crusaders who brave violence to try to convert their countrymen to the cause of cooperative goodwill and peace by the teaching of brotherhood.

Ways to Lasting Peace. By Dr. David Starr Jordan. Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis, Ind. 1916. 255 p. $1.00.

Like all of Dr. Jordan's work, this new book is interesting, and will prove helpful for those trying to think out the great questions affecting our international relations. It hardly represents Dr. Jordan's best. In Chapter 2, which is an analysis of propositions for lasting peace, the statement occurs on page 20 that "the oldest of these is the Union for Democratic Control, formed in London in September, 1914." Such a statement should have been defined to apply to programs organized since the war began. The book represents a gathering of many views without much consideration or analysis of the importance of those views.

Labour Year Book, 1916. Issued under the auspices of The Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress, The Executive Committee of the Labour Party, The Fabian Research Department. Co-operative Printing Society, Ltd., London, England. 688 p. One shilling, card covers, two shillings sixpence, cloth; postage extra.

A complete review of the labor movement in England for the year, with men like Arthur Henderson, M. P., J. A. Hobson, G. Bernard Shaw, Philip Snowden, M. P., and Sidney Webb among the contributors. The labor problem is discussed from the point of view of the war, industrial organization, politics, co-operative enterprise, internationalism, imperial and national government, local government, and social insurance, with facts and statistics.
